Public found the guide at the night of July 15July 14*2020

Pointed out that the attitude of the people against the coup opened a new era in Turkish politics on July 15, Prof. Dr. Şenol Durgun said: "In such illegitimate situations of intervention, the public was always hesitant about how to react. In fact, in every coup attempt, the public sought a guide, a voice, that would lead them not to hesitate on how to act, and found its guide at the night of July 15. Their leadership attitude was also admirable."

Prof. Dr. Şenol Durgun from Istanbul Gelisim University evaluated the July 15 treacherous coup attempt. Durgun said: "It was thought that the passive presence of the people against the forces in the coup attempt will continue exactly as in the coups carried out so far. The relation of the Turkish society with the state and its traditional respect for the state made it not know how to act in such interventions to disrupt the system." And added: "Because in the ancient Turkish culture, the public was always hesitant about how to behave in such illegitimate situations of intervention, as the rebellion to the state is identified with the insurrection to the father". In fact, in every coup attempt, the public sought a guide, a voice, that would lead them not to hesitate on how to act, and found its guide at the night of July 15."
