

THEMATIC COLLECTIONS

Security Studies

The JSTOR Security Studies collection gathers academic and policy research on international and national security problems and foreign policy issues, encompassing perspectives from around the world. This interdisciplinary resource has been built in collaboration with librarians, scholars, and policy researchers, and with guidance from an advisory group of academics and professionals in the community.

It covers a range of topics including:

- Terrorism & Political Violence
- Peace & Conflict Studies
- Foreign Policy
- Cyber Security
- Human Security
- International Law
- Military Studies
- Intelligence & Espionage

The collection will feature 75 journals and up to 20,000 reports and policy briefs from over 100 institutes, and builds on the wealth of political science and international relations scholarship already on JSTOR.

Explore Security Studies on JSTOR at jstor.org/security-studies/

Lives of Literature

The JSTOR Lives of Literature collection gathers academic journals dedicated to the in-depth study of writers and texts associated with core literary movements.

This resource supports advanced literary studies and interdisciplinary research on writers and texts critical to curricula in literature. And with its focus on journals that use an author or text as a starting place, the collection fulfills a scholarly resource need for comprehensive study and courses on a single author—a curricular component at many institutions.

Built in collaboration with librarians and scholars, Lives of Literature will include approximately 100 journals that are all new to JSTOR. Key topics are:

- Medieval Authors & Texts
- Modernist Authors
- Victorian, Edwardian & Gothic Authors
- Literary Theorists

Explore the collection at: about.jstor.org/livesoflit