WARNING FROM THE EXPERT: THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS A FAT-FREE DIET!

JULY 1

2022

Asst. Prof. Dr. Ayşe Huri Özkarabulut, the Head of the Nutrition and Dietetics Department at Istanbul Gelisim University, stated that the body's fat needs can be met with 10-15 hazelnuts, raw almonds or 5-6 walnuts to be consumed daily.

Fat consumption, which is very significant in diet, causes question marks in the minds of dieters. Asst. Prof. Dr. Ayşe Huri Özkarabulut, Head of the Nutrition and Dietetics Department at Istanbul Gelisim University, indicated, "We need to consume a little fat in order to take fat-soluble vitamins into our bodies. As an alternative to vegetable oils, we can increase fish consumption and meet some of our oil needs with oil seeds. At the same time, the body's fat needs can be met with 10-15 hazelnuts, raw almonds or 5-6 walnuts that we will consume daily.

UNSUSTAINABLE FASHION HABITS MUST CHANGE TO ENSURE SUSTAINABILITY"

JUNE 30

In recent years, the concept of "sustainability" has entered our lives by increasing awareness with the climate crisis, depletion of resources and environmental pollution in the world. Asst. Prof. Dr. Soneser Yurdakul stated that consumption habits should be changed for sustainable development in the fashion industry.

Nowadays, with the depletion of natural resources, the increase in the cost of traditional energy resources, the decisions are taken at the global level to reduce carbon emissions, and the increase in social-environmental awareness, sustainable production strategies have become mandatory.

Asst. Prof. Dr. Soneser Yurdakul, from Istanbul Gelisim University (IGU) Faculty of Fine Arts, Fashion and Textile Design Department stated the following: "Contrary to the fast-fashion approach, where resources are rapidly consumed, based on cheap labor and creating environmental pollution with the high amount of waste generation, the concept of "sustainable fashion", which is based on ecological integrity and social justice, has been rapidly adopted in the fashion and textile industry in Turkey, along with the whole world. Hence, in order to ensure sustainability, unsustainable fashion habits need to change."discussed with Prof. Dr. İsmail Koyuncu, Rector of Istanbul Technical University.

EGG FREEZING IS SIGNIFICANT FOR WOMEN UNDERGOING CANCER TREATMENT

We often hear about the importance of egg reserves in women who desire to have children. Gynecologist Asst. Prof. Dr. Ayşe Konaç stated that the detection of decreases in egg reserve is learned by looking at some hormones in the blood, and added today, with the advancement of gestational age, women tend to freeze their eggs.

About 1 million potential eggs (follicles) are present in the ovaries of newborn girls. When adolescence begins, these egg candidates are chosen one by one each month, and menstrual bleeding is consistently observed as a result of the methodical and coordinated functioning of the hormones in a specific order. The cycle starts and ends with menopause if there is no interruption in the release of hormones. If there is a disruption, the cycle continues until the follicular reserves in the eggs are depleted. Infertility occurs if, for a variety of reasons, these reserves decline during the menstrual cycle and monthly irregularity starts.
