The IGU Institutional Open Access Archive (DSpace@Gelisim) (<http://acikerisim.gelisim.edu.tr>), which was launched at the end of 2018, is getting richer every day! Our archive has exceeded 5000 materials as of August 2023.

All kinds of documents (articles, bulletins, thesis, books, book chapters, presentations, videos, etc.) produced by our students and passed through academic and administrative control can be uploaded to our open access archive. Articles are archived after being checked by international publishing policy systems such as SHERPA/ROMEO. Studies produced within IGU can be sent to acikerisim@gelisim.edu.tr e-mail address. After the controls, the installation process will be started. Open Access Archives increase the academic visibility and citations of authors and contribute to institutions in webometric rankings. Our institutional open access archive serves within the framework of 'Istanbul Gelisim University Open Access Policy Senate Principles'. DSpace@Development has international standards, respects copyrights and supports the corporate open access philosophy.

DO NOT BE DIRECTLY EXPOSED TO THE AIR BLOWN BY THE AIR CONDITIONER!

14 AUGUST 2023

With the increase in hot weather, the use of air conditioning in homes, workplaces and cars is increasing. Stating that the long-term and uncontrolled use of air conditioners paves the way for health problems, Chest Diseases Specialist Asst. Prof. Dr. Aygun Gur warned that the diseases of people with lung diseases such as COPD and asthma may be exacerbated. The windows should be opened occasionally, the environment should be ventilated and the air blown by the air conditioner must not be exposed directly.
