IGU Coordinatorship of Struggling with Addictions has started its studies

Addictions are a significant public health problem that is increasing daily in our country and worldwide. The prevalence of addictions with a biopsychosocial dimension, the diseases and functional disorders they cause, the shortening of life expectancy and decreasing quality, the cost of treatment, and most importantly, the fact that they are preventable make it very crucial.

Prevention and early intervention studies are important in the solution of addictions. In particular, early detection of individuals at risk and knowing which individual and environmental factors pose risks or are protective is significant.

A multidisciplinary approach is required in its solution, as it has social, educational and legal aspects besides its health dimension. In our university, the "Coordinatorship of Struggling with Addictions" has been established within the scope of the Action Plan for Struggling Addictions of Higher Education Institution (YÖK). This coordinatorship aims to inform our students about addictions, increase their awareness, provide protective measures and support their questions and problems. Within the scope of the coordinatorship, community-based sustainable addiction trainings and activities on addiction were organized for our students. A "Coordinatorship Web Page" was created and "Academic Field Studies on Addictions" were started. These studies were reported to the Higher Education Institution(YÖK) as the "2022-2023 Fall Term Addiction Report".
